"DECOY" TEACHES ART OF COURTING

TWO MEN HIT BY AUTO NEAR DEATH

Manchester, N. H., Oct. 17 (U.N.S.).—Charles Abrams of this city and Harvey Baker of Lawrence are near death in hospital and police are searching for Frank Gaudier of Lawrence, driver of an automobile that struck them.

Abrams and Baker, with James Clifford and John Rana, were coming to Manchester when their auto stalled. They stepped out to investigate and the auto from Lawrence, driven, police say, by Gaudier, struck Abrams and Baker and then plunged into a ravine. According to witnesses, the Gaudier car was running at high speed. Gaudier, uninjured, vanished.

A search of the car revealed two vials of liquor, police charges.

GUARD AMBASSADOR OF ITALY SONS MEET

Providence, Oct. 17 (U.N.S.).—Providence police officials are making elaborate arrangements for the protection of Prince Galeo Gaudino, Italian Ambassador to the United States, who is expected here tomorrow to attend the supreme convention of the Sons of Italy. Front-

Weed was on the circular advertising her "Personality School" in the back bay. She opened the school after she is said to have quit the ranks of the "sinner wamps."

CLUBBED, BURNED BY COPS, HE SAYS

New York, Oct. 17 (U.N.S.).—Frightened and unable to eat or sleep, Douglas Londe, Filipino, who confessed he killed Blomson Martin, a pretty nurse, by choking her to death, was back in his cell in the Tombs today.

He will go on the witness stand Monday and with the aid of an interpreter, tell his story of the slaying of the white girl who spurned his love.

In his defense, according to his attorney, Londe will show the jury marks of his body caused, he alleges by clubs and burning cigarettes in the hand of police who threatened the confession from him. In his appearance on the witness stand the Filipino, hampered by his inability to speak English, in broken answers to questions of his lawyer, said he choked the nurse after she had threatened him with a knife. Without an interpreter, his testimony was so confusing that he was not permitted to continue.

52,000 SEE HARVARD BATTLE DARTMOUTH

LINCOLN. Harvard, Dartmouth, the two teams, were seen by 52,000 spectators at the stadium today. The game was a close one, but Harvard won by a score of 13-0. The game was played in the afternoon and the weather was clear. The spectators were very much interested in the game and the players were very much interested in winning. TELLS GIRLS SECRETS OF COURTING

Evangeline Weed is named by "Vamps" as Member of Blackmail Ring

"What became of Evangeline Weed?" asked an attorney of Mrs. Lillian Hardy Reese, (Lilly the Lure) the other day in the famous blackmail trial in Superior Criminal Court. Nobody knew.

"She was used as a decoy," said the attorney, meaning that Evangeline had been one of the ring's decoys who trapped James L. Donovan, Max Kohn and others.

On the day when she was used most successfully, was the answer. "Punish. Wonder what became of her."

The Boston American reveals today what became of Evangeline. She is running a school in Boston's Back Bay.

She occupies a mansion at No. 7 Marlboro street.

She has 150 pupils. She calls her school a charm school.

She tells women how to win men. Personality is the keynote of Evangeline's instruction.

She advertises the cultivation of personality, she tells herself. When you mention a blackmail ring, and the days which, according to testimony, she "lured the boys" to her.

Nothing dumb about Evangeline, she "lured" the "vamps" as Dugan calls her.

WEST END SUICIDE FEARED BLINDNESS

Proving death to blindness, Joseph F. Chandler, forty-two years old, of No. 12, Pitts street, West End, tried a chisel on his neck, forced an end to the top of his bedroom door and hanged himself today.

Chandler, employed by the B. & M. Grant Contracting Company in the sanitary department of the city of Boston, has been losing his sight for some time. One eye was completely useless and the other fast approaching blindness.

During the past weeks Chandler has been telling his landlady that he would kill himself rather than face a blind old age. Two years ago Chandler and his wife, Mary, disagreed and separated. She is living in Danvers, according to the police.

DARTMOUTH 7, HARVARD 0

Dartmouth scored a touchdown in the first period of the game with Harvard at the Stadium. From a double pass, Haws went around right end for first down on the Harvard 38-yard line. Kelly made 4 yards off right tackle. On another double pass, Leavitt ran into Harvard's 22-yard line. Haws made 3 yards at right end. A second pass, Kelly to Haws, gave Dartmouth a touchdown. Haws place kicked a goal. Score: Dartmouth 7, Harvard 0. This was the first Dartmouth touchdown against Harvard in 17 years.

Dartmouth got another touchdown in the second period. A fake pass and line smashes by Haws, Leavitt and Hall, Haws failed at goal. Dartmouth 13, Harvard 0.

Boston's biggest football crowd converged on the Stadium today to watch Harvard and Dartmouth stage one of those gridiron classics. More than 52,000 were to be inside the horseshoe when the whistle blew at 2:30, a greater throng than ever looked on at a Yale game.

25 KILLED IN FOOD RIOTS OF GERMANS IN THE RUHR

Dusseldorf, Oct. 17 (U.N.S.).—Food and unemployment riots, reported by piling, are reported from various towns throughout the Ruhr.

Twenty persons were killed and 100 were wounded at Bochum and five killed at Duisburg.

The rioting at Bochum, killed one policeman after a forty-one-hour strike.

According to her crew, she behaved beautifully. The crew of thirty in the Gloucester, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland.

The first race of this year's series will be sailed Monday.

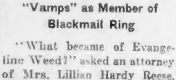

The Gloucester schooner, sailing for Captain Ben Pina, arrived yesterday.

The garage and barn were destroyed.

"IN THE HEART OF THE CITY—IN THE SERVICE OF THE CITY"

A Finer Citizenship!

Because in ten years the enrollment at Boston University has increased from 1,500 to more than 11,000 students, the University is raising a Fiftieth Anniversary Fund of $4,500,000. Of this amount, $2,000,000—including a pledge of $400,000 from the General Education Board of the Rockefeller Foundation—already has been subscribed. In 1914 the total endowment was $2,367,520, and now is but $3,707,182. The deficit is evident.

A vital factor in the moral, professional and industrial betterment of New England, the University unfolds a record of achievement continuous through fifty years, and seeks—not aims, but capital for expansion of its service to those who study within its walls; to provide, also, for those who seek admission.

To men of broad, true vision, who have at heart the highest welfare of our youth, who know that on them the whole future well-being of our city, state and country rests, I believe this cause will strongly appeal.

An investment in a finer citizenship is offered; no more; nothing less.

New England should take the entire issue.

PAVLOWA HAS MANY NEW DANCES

Pavlova and her Ballet Russe have arranged a repertoire for her Boston management, which opens at the Opera House Monday night, that for divergence of character and general attractiveness, will make difficult for patrons to choose a favorite offering. The incomparable Anna will, during the week, stage at least four of her new productions, while the most popular features of the dancers' past visits here will be put on some of the time in an entirely new dress and with new, colorful and modern visual and lighting effects.

Pavlova brings with her to Boston as her premier dancer, Laurent Novikoff, for several seasons back her dancing partner, and who has accompanied her round the world. Other notable in the principalities of the Ballet Russe include Ivan Clus-Gas, ballet-master, and such favorites as Mlle. Puzos, Bluet and Prieur. In the masculine section are M. Pavlov, Zlatkevich, Vagrenski and Olshoff, with the eminent Theodore Bittie presiding over the symphonic department.

The inaugural at the Opera House Monday evening is of double significance, the management having announced one of Pavlova's past Boston favorites, "The Fire of the Orient," a three-act feature. "Oriental Impressions" the first of which is "Jannone" and the other two "Hindu in character."

Bernard Nedell Figured in War Romance
Bernard Nedell the new leading man of the Somerville Theatre plays a role who has entrenched himself firmly in the hearts of the patrons of Clyde McKeen's playhouse. In one of the few actors of the American stage who boasts of a war romance, Nedell was over seas during the activities of the late Betty Burnlock, a popular Boston girl.

Following a Bernard Nedell courtship of several months, they were married and afterwards joined a company that traveled throughout the Orient. On their way home Miss Burnlock was taken suddenly ill and subsequently passed away at Los Angeles. Nedell came East and was at one engaged by Mr. McKeen to lead his company.

Jesse Intropodi Holds Memory of Patti
Jesse Intropodi, the Duke of Italy, Irene and Mary, the Withour loves to tell of her childhood and of her mother. "One day after mother had left the stage," said Mr. Intropodi, "a dignified looking gentleman called at our house. Mother's caller was from Mrs. Patti, who was sent to ask mother to sing in 'Romanticism.' At the time I was only a young girl and for some reason or other didn't care for the idea of having mother on the stage again. I told the man mother was no longer on the stage. From that mother was terrified. 'Joke, dear,' she exclaimed. 'I don't think you understand. I was a mother, and I must go.'"
The Intropodi family, under the leadership of Montclair Antonio Jella, returns to Symphony Hall on Monday evening for a second concert. An entirely different program is promised and undoubtedly by the choir will give even more pleasure at this time before.

HESS RECITAL

One of the interesting musical events of the coming week will be the appearance in Jordan Hall on Wednesday evening of Mrs. Hess, an English pianist of rare accomplishments. Mrs. Hess will be heard in a program that promises a great deal of enjoyment and as she is known as an artist of fine ability her recital should arouse the interest of all music lovers.

SHYLOCK HIS DOMINANT AMBITION

David Warfield's appearance as Shylock in "The Merchant of Venice" under the direction of David Belasco at the Colonial Theatre on Monday, will reveal the realization of an ambition which has animated and guided him to successive higher attainments since the beginning of his career. In all the long years of his artistic growth there never has been a time in which to impregnate this most exacting of all Shakespeare's characters was not his goal. But David Warfield aims to Shylock by no royal road. "The Merchant of Venice" does not represent a fleeting addition to a famous actor's repertoire, for his characterization is the sum of more than twenty years of patient research, ceaseless study and the cleavage of an intellectual life, as his library which overflows with books, manuscripts and plates attesting to Shylock's convincing testimony.

From the beginning of his long association with Mr. Belasco it was understood that eventually he was to be presented as Shylock.

NEW PHOTO STAR IN "FOOL" SHOCK TO STOKES

New York, Oct. 27.—Mrs. I. L. Hill, a photographer, delivered a smashing blow at the evidence which maintained W. E. D. Stokes had attempted to accumulate against his wife, Helen Elwood Stokes, at the trial of his divorce suit against her, when he testified that a photograph identified as that of Mrs. Stokes and alleged to have been in Edgar Wallace's apartment in 1913 and 1914 was not taken until 1918, five years after the alleged apartment episode.

Hill brought records and negatives to show the truth of his testimony. His evidence created a sensation in court.

NEGATIVES REFUTED.
Stokes had previously brought three witnesses, all negatived, who swore that the photograph, entered as an exhibit and identified as that of Mrs. Stokes, had been on a bureau in the Wallace apartment in New York.

Their identification of that photograph was positive and could not be shaken by the cross-examination.

CLARK UNIVERSITY BOOSTS TUITION FEE
Worcester, Oct. 27.—The trustees of Clark University voted to increase the tuition fee from $100 to $150, beginning next September, and established a new department of Education, open to teachers and other educators. The increase in tuition fee, President Wallace W. Atwood said, was made necessary by the increase cost of the university. The increase means $40 instead of $10, for the present $10 general fee is included in the $150.

STOKES NOT FLUENT.
Stokes, sitting in his cell cap in the courtroom, was visibly unimpressed and somewhat of a table many long days watching the structure of his case tumbling piece by piece, more from the possibility of the testimony of his witnesses than from any relaxation by plausible explanation of doubtful areas of the case.

Long Search For Father Ends in Illusion

FAIL TO PRAY, CUT OFF IN WILL

Real Estate Man Wanted Children to "Reap as They Have Sown"

Failure of the six children of Israel Gottfried, well-to-do Boston realtor, to say a Hebrew prayer at the time of their mother's death resulted in their being cut off with $1 each in their father's will.

The will has just been filed for probate in the Middlesex Probate Court in East Cambridge. After allowing $1 to each of the children, the will designates that the residue shall be used to establish a dispensary "free to all regardless of race, color or creed." The estate is valued at $40,000.

UPRAIDS CHILDREN.

Mr. Gottfried made provision in his will for the publishing in three Jewish papers of the following: "I have cut off my six children with $1 each and wish it to be published... so as to show the world as example of how my children have repaid as they have sown." "The treatment of me I can forgive, but I cannot forgive or even come my disappointment and chagrin at their failure to say Kaddish for their dead mother."

"Kaddish," according to Hebrew custom, is a prayer for a dead father or mother each day during the first year of the parent's death, and on the anniversary of the parent's death thereafter.

PROVIDES FOR DISPENSARY.

The will provides for the sale of the stock of the deceased in the Everett Realty Company with the exception of one parcel of land on Irving street, Everett. On that parcel the executors are directed to erect a building, the first floor of which shall be used for a drug store and other mercantile establishments, and the second floor of which shall be used as a dispensary free to all regardless of race, color or creed.

The will specified that the dispensary shall be known as the "Israel and Lena Gottfried Dispensary," and shall be maintained by the residue of the estate.

The testator also directs that he shall be buried beside his wife, Lena, in Woodlawn Cemetery, Everett, and that "an honest old man shall be employed by my Kaddish and Mishna over my grave for one year, and also to light candles on the anniversaries of the deaths of my wife and myself."

The six children of Israel and Lena Gottfried are: Mrs. Minnie Label, Mrs. Fannie Pollin, Mrs. S. S. Polansky, Samuel, Max and Isaac Gottfried. All reside in Everett.

Widow Says Kiss on Husband's Bald Head Was Fatal

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 26.—Strange problems confront the workmen's compensation board daily, but none has been stranger than the claim for damages over death from a kiss on the bald head.

Mrs. Margaret Fisher, widow of Harry E. Fisher, asked compensation from the Mesta Machine Company. Her husband, she testified, was sitting in his office in the machine company plant when Philip Clark, a fellow employee, kissed the bald spot on Fisher's head. A scuffle followed and Fisher's neck was broken.

GIRL SMUGGLES GUNS INTO PRISON

New York, Oct. 27.—Details of the escape of six prisoners from the Pennsylvania State Penitentiary at Philadelphia on July 14 last were told by Joseph Brown, Charles Wilson, who was captured in Brooklyn in a similar attempt to escape through five States.

Two guns, smuggled into the prison by the escapees, were found in the prison and an improvised ladder made of torn coverings and pillow slips, made possible the overpowering of a guard and scaling of the penitentiary wall, enabling the prisoners to make a quick getaway. Brown told the police.

His companions were Louis Edwards, James Gilman, George Brown, Leo Callahan and James Williams. Brown said he did not know where they were hiding.

"After Williams' sweetheart smuggled two guns to him, we felt we were ready for the break and waited for the chance," Brown related.

"Williams and Callahan packed the guns out with them the morning we got away. They waited for a chance and then approached the guard at the same time. They struck him on the head with the butt end of the gun, and he went down like a log. Then we made for the wall with the improvised ladder, threw a cover and landed outside."

Taking the automobile truck near the penitentiary the convicts made their way by automobile and boat to New Jersey, beating a trail of crime through Pennsylvania, Maryland and Delaware, Brown admitted.

Extradition proceedings will be brought against Brown by District Attorney Samuel T. Rosen, of Philadelphia. This prisoner together with his comrades faces 10 indictments, including highway robbery, assault, burglary, kidnapping, to kill, and kidnapping.

KIDNAPING CHARGES TO TIE MAN

Roxbury Wife Who Fled Family to Join Him Has Him Arrested

Charging she was kidnaped a young Roxbury wife and mother, Mrs. Lena Simmonds, has had Darrel E. Patterson, until recently a Boston tire dealer, arrested in Syracuse, N. Y.

Mrs. Simmonds left her husband, her four-year-old son and year-old baby girl, and joined Patterson in Syracuse, she told police, after receiving a threatening letter from him.

Her relations with Patterson are purely platonic, she stated in an affidavit. She met Patterson in Boston while estranged from her husband, whom she sued for divorce. Later husband and wife were reconciled.

Mrs. Simmonds, she contends, pulled her $10 for railroad fare and she had intended his Boston business to Syracuse. She says she returned the money, but her husband's action, but Patterson then threatened to "kill anyone" who interfered.

Mrs. Simmonds is twenty-four. She had married E. J. Simmonds in 1914. Simmonds' story is that he had followed her to Syracuse, where he was going to her mother's in Pennsylvania.

The two children, Homer and Rosa, are with the husband's parents in Rochester.

ROSE FRITZ, "TAXI THIEF" IS INSANE

Rose Fritz, who spent $2,000 on taxi-cab, is insane.

A report to that effect was read in Municipal Court today.

When she was scheduled to appear in court today, she was found to be insane and was committed to the charge of insanity. She was taken to the Psychopathic Hospital. Before she can be committed to a lunatic asylum, she must undergo an examination in higher court, charging her with theft.

LEVIATHAN REACHES PORT 24 HOURS LATE

Somerset, Oct. 27.—The Leviathan arrived today 24 hours late on the voyage to New York from London. Commander Stanley said he had made the trip in beautiful weather, but when engine trouble developed it was necessary to halt the ship.

Commander Stanley refused to run at a greater speed than fourteen knots, today's weather, however, was so good that repairs were being made, but later on it was necessary to stop for the remainder of the journey.

TAMMANY IS OFFERED CROKER WEALTH

MRS. BULA E. CROKER

Widow of former Tammany chairman offers bulk of Croker estate who she inherited to Tammany Hall "to have and to hold." Charles Murphy, present leader of the organization, has not announced yet if the offer will be accepted.

RICHES OF BOSS OFFERED TO N. Y. CLUB

New York, Oct. 27.—The 12 Croker widow of Richard Croker, former Tammany leader, has offered the estate of her husband to Tammany Hall.

In making the offer to Charles F. Murphy, present Tammany chief, Mrs. Croker said she was carrying out the wishes expressed by Mr. Croker on his death bed in Dublin.

CROKER'S WISHES.
She declared it had been his wish that she give to New York, go to Tammany Hall and "offer the boys all the help they need."

Mrs. Croker not only offered the Croker estate she offered her own services.

"The spirit of my husband went with me to Tammany Hall," she said, "he sat at my side as I offered whatever I am and whatever I have have to the cause he loved. I hesitate to talk about it because people will think me fanatical."

"I am doing only that which Richard Croker would have me do, would do himself if he were in the flesh. What I have was his, what he had was at the command of his friends. I have taken what he left me to his friends. I ask nothing in return."

Asked what Murphy said when she made the offer, Mrs. Croker declared he had only put his hand on her shoulder and invited her to attend a Tammany dinner Sunday night. She said she would be proud to do so.

Nothing definite was decided upon, she said, "I merely asked Mr. Murphy what he needed. It is for him to decide."

Mrs. Croker is in complete control of the Richard Croker estate, except part of it involved in litigation with Richard Croker, Jr. The estate not involved is said to be worth more than $1,000,000.

ODD CASE OF MISKIDNAPED IDENTITY

Rich New Yorker Picked Out by "Wife" and "Daughter" Had No Apparent Scar

New York, Oct. 27.—Bertha Lubinsky's eight years' search for her father ended unsuccessfully when Barnett Lubinsky, a wealthy retired clothing manufacturer, proved in the Bronx Supreme Court that he was the victim of an unusual case of mistaken identity.

His story, corroborated by many witnesses and the fact that he did not have a scar from an operation for appendicitis, after the identification of the girl who said she was his daughter and the elderly woman who came from Richmond, Indiana, and picked him out from forty men as her long lost husband.

Barnett Lubinsky was arrested last Monday on a bench warrant issued by Judge Conroy, but after Bertha had traced him to the Bronx and shown a photograph of her father which she showed to an officer in the Lubinsky's former business address.

PICKS OUT LUBINSKY

She telegraphed to her mother after she went to the Bronx address with Detective Gilbert and Reilly and identified Lubinsky. Mrs. Lubinsky was taken to the Bronx County Court, where Judge Louis D. Gibbs was trying a case before four justices and she was asked, "If her husband was in the room."

"I think that is my husband," she said, "but he looks changed. He is older and has less hair, but his actions are just the same." Thereafter, she was taken to the room.

When she saw the man, she said she was sure it was her husband. She was taken to the room, where she was asked to identify the man. She said she was sure it was her husband.

SAMEL'S BROTHER SAYS "NO"

After the testimony of the two women had been heard, David Lubinsky, brother of the Samuel Lubinsky who deserted his family, declared he was the stand.

David ten years before. When asked if Barnett Lubinsky, who occupied a chair between the witness stand and Justice Tierney, was his brother, he said, "No, no, that's not my brother."

Mr. Cohen then admitted that he was a case of mistaken identity and asked that the writ of habeas corpus be sustained. Before dismissing the case Justice Tierney asked Bertha Lubinsky to the witness chair.

Cable Briefs

London—Premier Smuts of South Africa, told a deputating of the Empire Cotton Growing Association his government hoped to make the production of cotton one of the biggest industries in the state.

Warsaw—The partial railway strike continues. The government is able to maintain a few express and freight trains for conveyance of food. These are manned by soldiers.

London—England's oldest newspaper, the Pall Mall Gazette, passed out of existence with today's issue, being abolished by the Evening Standard. For many years it was owned by William Waldorf Astor.

Dublin—The Dublin port workers, 657 to 445, voted against accepting the government's proposal to settle their dispute with their employers by a wage reduction of one shilling a day.

Senators Defend the Budget System; Will Fight 'Pork Barrel' Raid

Washington, Oct. 27 (C.N.S.)—Opinions expressed today by leading members of the United States Senate were in opposition to any attempt to nullify the budget law, which would open the way to a return of the public's money, as characterized by the old "pork barrel" days in appropriating funds. Representative opinions follow:

By Senator Reed Smoot of Utah, chairman of the United States Senate Finance Committee:

There is not one chance in a million that the budget act will be repealed. In fact, its opponents cannot get a corporate guard in either the House or Senate for its repeal.

The budget system has already proved its worth. There can be no more trading for patronage in the future, or as long as the budget is in operation. We have a system in general. No better can be found in this or any other country.

By Senator Patrick Harrison of Michigan:

I have been an advocate of the budget system for many years. It is a system of "limited government," and it is the only system that can be maintained. It is a system of "limited government," and it is the only system that can be maintained.

By Senator William E. Borah of Idaho:

I am thoroughly in sympathy with the budget system, and believe that it ought to be respected and maintained. It is a system of "limited government," and it is the only system that can be maintained.

100 MILLION DEVIL REFUSES TO INSURE WORKERS TO GO FOR $10; ARREST BARBER

New York, Oct. 27.—Ten dollars for getting out the devil was not enough, in the opinion of Miss Mary Vella, nineteen, but when the devil or whatever aided her, remained to split the "evil machine" that John Riala, forty-nine, a barber, prescribed for her, she grew suspicious.

She gave Riala $15 more for more medicine and then had the medicine analyzed. It contained rhubarb and soda, laudanum, and opium, for which she paid $10. She then arrested Riala, a policeman, that she suspected the barber was himself a doctor.

But what annoyed Miss Vella was the information that the rhubarb and soda that cost her $15 might have been purchased for 20 cents.

Miss Vella complained to Mary O. Gardner, a policeman, that she suspected the barber was himself a doctor.

How the "Gallery Gods" Bid In

"Going—Going Gone!" and Right Caruso's Treasures

Before the Wealthy Collectors' Eyes, Barbers, Push-Cart Peddlers and Bootblacks Snapped Up Priceless Mementoes of the Great Tenor

Photograph of Enrico Caruso Affectionately Handling One of the Art Treasures from His Collection Which Has Now Been Distributed Among the Homes of His Admirers Ranging from Fruit Peddlers and Bootblacks to Millionaires.

"The Spinaro," One of Caruso's Highly Prized Bronze Statuettes, Dating Back to the Fifth Century, B. C.

NOT Fifth avenue's lordly mansions, but the tenements of the Italian quarter south of Washington Square, New York, to-day shelter most of the art treasures that were collected by Enrico Caruso, history's most famous tenor.

Along the narrow streets echoing day and night to phonograph records of a golden voice now still, strut the proud patres and prouder madres who spent their hoarded savings for a silver buckle, a crucifix, a wisp of ribbon, the slippers of Mantua's duke, Carlo's clown cap—anything to remind them of the singer who was their idol.

"See!" they whisper to the chubby bambino, and hold him up before the sketch by Caruso adorning on the white-washed wall, and tell him, if he is old enough, of the night they leaned from the gallery of the Metropolitan Opera House and heard the "sob song" teacher heart-string.

For months, almost from the day of Caruso's death, "Little Italy" waited for the event that frequently follows the passing of an opera star—the public sale of his costumes, his accoutrements and personal souvenirs.

Mrs. Dorothy Park Benjamin Caruso, widow of the tenor, at first was reluctant to part with any of her husband's possessions. Their married life was noted for its harmony. And there was little Gloria, their daughter, who would have her father's memory always kept green by these tokens of his fame.

But Mrs. Caruso was not greatly interested in antiques, ancient glass, Florentine bronzes, first editions, old coins and other art objects that Caruso, an enthusiastic collector and real connoisseur, had gathered from the corners and cubby-holes of the world. And so, keeping for Gloria one costume of every role Caruso ever sang, Mrs. Caruso authorized her attorneys to sell at auction more than one thousand mementoes of her husband. They ranged from fifteenth century Limoges plaques to caricatures Caruso dashed off of himself when he was in a merry mood. Her own share of the proceeds Mrs. Caruso announced she would donate to the Caruso foundation for struggling singers.

Below, Enrico Caruso, Jr., and Mrs. Dorothy Park Benjamin Caruso, Widow of the Great Tenor.

Caruso's Gilded Bronze Plaque with Two Medallions, Louis XIV. Period, for Which the Bidding Was Spirited.

countries and dead dynasties—Greek obols, Persian staters, German imperial eagles, Russian rubles of the reign of Peter the Great, Danish double ducats, English rose nobles, Elizabethan angels, Louis d'ors of France, Holland Gelders, Scottish unicorns.

Early 16th Century Bronze Horse, Formerly in the Pierpont Morgan Collection.

And, draped on dummies about the rooms, were the story that was Rhadames and the grandeur that was Des Grieux—Caruso's costumes. The tenderer jacket of "Carmen" bowed to the silver doublet of "Rigoletto" duke. In that pair of worn gauntlets he saw once more the swagger figure of a cavalier in the sight of those merry troupers one heard again the voice of Rudolph.

"It should be a record sale," predicted the auctioneer. And it was, but not alone in money. Before the last article had been knocked down to the highest bidder more than $150,000 had been totaled by the busy bookkeepers. Yet it was the list of purchasers rather than the amounts they paid—the names colorful of Tuscan hills and Naples' bay, the addresses almost exclusively confined to downtown streets—that made the sale unique.

They were Tony and Tommaso and Luigi and Camillo, the swarthy fellows with the flashing eyes who used to buy their tickets weeks ahead for the popular performances of a Verdi opera and who would sit, high among the dusty shadows of the topmost gallery, with their arms around their sweat-soaked, while the liquid notes of the "Miserere" or "E Donna Mobile" floated up to them from that far-off stage.

They were Marie and Caterina and Concetta and Loreta, the plump signorinas and signoras who would wait until the last echo of the voice had quivered into silence in the dark caves of the auditorium and then bluster their palms applauding until Caruso had come out and bowed and bowed again, and perhaps answered that shrill cry of "Bravo bravo!" with an encore.

They were "the gallery gods," the people who made the streets black before newspaper bulletin boards when Caruso was dying at Sorrento, who burned candles in the churches on the dark day when the cable came announcing that it was over.

Not all the art treasures went to them. Some of the objects valued more for their rarity and artistic worth went to dealers and millionaire hobbyists. One dealer paid $1,625 for a millenary Roman bowl of the first century. Another gave $2,200 for "The Adoration of the Magi," a Limoges enamel. Sigmund Wylar bought Caruso's famous "L'italiano," gold-fitted cravat bag for $1,800. E. A. Albee, son of the vaudeville magnate, paid $50 for two daggers used by Caruso in opera. W. R. Hearst bought a bed for $450—antique chairs and a cabinet of the 1500's.

A French Rodin Case of the 18th Century from the Caruso Collection.

Most of Caruso's costumes, slippers, ruffles, caps, belts, garters—things he had touched and handled and sometimes worn thin—found the cheapest bidders among the "unknowns," the motley swarm of swarthy, tempestuous, sometimes ragged and often garb-perturbed sons and daughters of "Little Italy."

They did not bid much, for they could not afford to compete with millionaires and wealthy dealers. But, with the millionaires and wealthy dealers withdrawing at this stage of the sale, the competition was far hotter. The offers started at two and three dollars and rose by halves, quarters and "seventy-five" to the fifteen and twenty dollar "top price."

The Rhadames costume of "Aida" brought the highest price, $7. The Canio clown costume of "Pagliacci" was another record-breaker. It was knocked down for $25. Topples this was Riccardo's embroidered velvet mantle the tenor wore in "The Mated Ball." Its price was $37.50. It was noticeable especially for Verdi, out-auctioned others, such as Samson's robe in Saint-Saens' opera, "Samson and Delilah." One old friend of Caruso's declared, "If he had only sung 'O Sole Mio' in opera, that costume would have brought the big bonanza of them all!"

Caricatures by Caruso aroused almost as much excitement as the costumes. Caruso was a clever artist, though he never used a pen or pencil except to self. Scores of these sketches were put on the block. The average price they brought was $17. Self-portraits led the list. One man became so excited by Caruso's sketch of himself full-length, in evening dress, that he parted with $55 for its possession.

To-day, as one walks from the Garibaldi statue in Washington Square into the crowded "marg" of Sullivan and Thompson streets, he will have pointed out to him certain black-eyed, black-mustached fruit peddlers and restaurateurs and managers of shoe-shining establishments who look upon the rest of the world with the pompous air of men marked apart from their fellows.

They are not pointed out, however, as the political bosses or war heroes or rich men of the ward, but as "the tenor who owns Caruso's inkstand," or "he has the cap of Canio—Caruso's very own!"

Medbury Says

By John P. Medbury

NOW that so much traveling is being done by automobile, people who have friends coming to town have to go out to the highway to meet them.

SOME towns are even putting waiting rooms at the city limits.

INSTEAD of your friends advising you what town and berth they're in, they'll just wait the make of their car and the engine number.

YOU can forget about flowers and candy and be down there to meet them with five gallons of gas and a quart of oil.

OF course, your visitors will be good and hungry and you must be prepared for this. You should take along two or three cards with the address of a restaurant on them.

THEY'll probably want to see the beauties of your city right away, so you ought to have a pocketful of post cards too.

THEY can look at the pictures on the postals while riding along the boulevard on the way to your house.

ANY road is dangerous when traffic is heavy, so you should never meet your friends on the highway on Sunday.

ONE man went out to meet some friends who were coming in a Studebaker and he got run over by seven Fords.

WHEN he finally met his friends they thought he should be a flivver by the tire marks on his collar.

HIS looked down and discovered that his brand new shirt was run-out.

AFTER this he's going to have his vest made out of concrete or marmalade.

PARENTS OWE LOVE TO EACH OTHER AS WELL AS TO CHILDREN.

Too many fathers and mothers lavish practically all their love and attention on their children and pay too little attention to each other.

A mother likes to feel that she still holds a warm place in her husband's heart after their children arrive.

A father cannot be happy if all his wife's thought is given to the children and little consideration is given to his comfort and his interests.

With every husband and wife there should be the understanding that the children are entitled to love, care and protection, but there should not be the impression given that the parent takes second place in affection.

Be sure that your children are not the ones who are creating the chasm between your husband or your wife and yourself.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

The Boston American will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Most Embarrassing Moments in My Life." Address: Embarrassing Moments, Boston American.

The most embarrassing moment of my life occurred when I was requested to play a piece on the piano from memory before a number of guests at our house. After being seated at the instrument, I found I could not remember a line of the composition to be played, much to the amusement of those assembled.

SMART SAYINGS OF CLEVER CHILDREN

The Boston American will pay $1 for published smart sayings. Address: "Smart Sayings," Boston American.

There is a lady in my neighborhood who always takes her six-year-old son along wherever she goes. One evening upon returning home very much bored by the day's experience, the boy remarked: "Mother, if you don't stop taking me around with you so much people will think you married a dwarf."
